Re: New proposed ten-year plan from Postmaster General Louis DeJoy

Dear Sir/Madam:

This letter is written in to express both my displeasure and alarm at the new proposed ten-year plan from Postmaster General Louis DeJoy.

The change of no longer using airplanes for first-class service would significantly slow down service to all U.S. citizens, but would be particularly detrimental to seniors who rely on the U.S. mail to get vitally needed prescription medications. Such delays could put their health, if not their very lives in danger!

Additionally, the proposal to close down a significant number of post offices across the country would place a significant burden on those who live in remote areas, and again on senior citizens who may have issues with limited physical mobility and/or are unable to drive. This proposal would also significantly slow down the delivery of mail across the country.

There are also many other items in this plan that would serve to privatize or eliminate many of the services that are now available through the U.S. postal service. Such changes would drive up the cost of getting mail processed while again slowing down the rate that mail is delivered. So, in essence, the American taxpayers would pay more for inferior service, which frankly is just not fair!

I urge the Postal Regulatory Commission to reject Postmaster General DeJoy's proposed ten-year plan. The people of this country deserve WAY BETTER than this!

Thank you for your attention.

Regards,

Anat Friedmann
